We Can Save Our Boys of Color: Promising Practices From the Field

Presented by Dr. Abdul-Malik Muhammad, Akoben, this workshop highlights disproportionate disciplinary practices affecting at-risk youth, especially boys of color and seeks to identify innovative and alternative interventions. Participants can expect to identify and build understanding in the implementation of five best practices in serving this population. These practices are applicable within the school, community, and criminal justice environments.

Who Should Attend: Site Administrators, Guidance Counselors, Mental Health Providers, After School Program Staff, Student Assistance Program Coordinators, Prevention Coordinators, Community Partners, and PBIS Coordinators
