RTA Travel Training Program

The RTA Travel Training program is for people with disabilities who want to learn to travel safely and independently using public transportation. Travel training is a free, self-paced process where an individual, regardless of ability or age, can learn to ride RTA's fixed-route system. Individuals with physical, cognitive and visual disabilities who wish to gain travel independence and confidence can familiarize themselves with the RTA bus system. Time spent on training is based on the individual's need, and instructors will spend as much time as necessary to ensure that each person is comfortable traveling independently.

Dial-a-Ride

Dial-A-Ride is a curb-to-curb advanced reservation transportation service for individuals with disabilities. Dial-A-Ride vehicles travel to areas within three-quarters of a mile of an RTA local fixed route. These areas are called the "Dial-A-Ride service areas" and trips must begin and end in that service area. If a trip starts or ends outside the service area, a person needs to find a safe place within the service area to be picked up and dropped off to be eligible for services. Individuals who do not qualify for Travel Training may be referred for Dial-A-Ride services.

Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI)

Supplemental Security Income (SSI) is a federal income supplement program. SSI pays benefits to disabled adults and children with limited income to provide for basic needs such as food, clothing and shelter. Prior to the age of 18, SSI pays benefits based on family financial need. From the age of 18, developmentally disabled adults qualify due to limited income. Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) may pay benefits to a disabled adult prior to the age of 22 if a parent is deceased and was insured, meaning that the parent worked longer than a specified length of time and paid Social Security taxes during that time. This is considered a "child's" income because it is paid on a parent's Social Security earnings record.
